Labor Day Weekend Flea Market the LAST UNTIL OCTOBER

Flea Market to close temporarily for Annual State Fair

ALBUQUERQUE – As it has for the last 40 years, the EXPO New Mexico Flea Market will close temporarily – for three consecutive weekends – to make way for the 2009 New Mexico State Fair. Labor Day Weekend, September 5th and 6th, will be the last Flea Market until it reopens the weekend of October 3rd and 4th. The 2009 New Mexico State Fair Runs Friday, September 11th through Sunday, September 27th.

About the EXPO New Mexico Flea Market

The EXPO New Mexico Flea Market takes place every Saturday and Sunday from 7 a.m. to dusk on the Midway lot, except during the annual New Mexico State Fair for three weeks each September. It is the state's oldest and largest open-air market. Located in the heart of Albuquerque, you'll find more than 1,300 vendors situated on 25 acres. The Flea Market features all the flavors of New Mexico – from clothing and jewelry to food and furniture. If you're looking for that special treasure, chances are, you'll find it at the Expo New Mexico Flea Market. From musical instruments to auto parts, fresh fruits and vegetables, trinkets, collectibles, toys, and arts and crafts, the Flea Market has it all.

Foot traffic is welcome to enter at Gate 1 (Central between Louisiana and San Pedro). Visit <http://www.exponm.com/en/fleamarket/> for more information.
